TPD fare evader nabbed on warrants

Transit Police officers on patrol at the Tufts New England Medical Center station snagged a man for piggybacking behind a paying customer, only to find out he was wanted on numerous drug charges.

Giovanny Perdomo, 35, of Jamaica Plain, attempted to evade paying the fare by sneaking in behind another rider. When officers approached him to give him a citation, they discovered there were several warrants out for his arrest. METRO

Trolley derails near Fenway, service cut

Off the tracks. Ten people were treated for minor injuries after a Green Line car veered off the tracks.

Investigators are looking into what caused a Green Line trolley to veer off the tracks Monday near Fenway Station, injuring 10 people and disrupting service throughout the day and evening.

MBTA Spokeswoman Kelly Smith said officials were doing everything possible to restore service in time for the morning commute.

"We have crews working feverishly to reach that goal. In terms of investigation it is still ongoing. They are investigating everything from the vehicle, to the signal, to the track, to the actions of the operator," Smith said.

The first car of a Riverside-bound D Line trolley derailed inside a tunnel between Kenmore and Fenway stations around 12:20 p.m., causing another train to slam on its brakes.

Boston EMS Spokesman Nick Martin said 10 patients were taken to hospitals "all with relatively minor injuries."

Boston Fire officials said some were hurt when the second train stopped short to avoid rear-ending the derailed train. The derailed trolley's operators were among those injured.

Photographs taken at the scene showed the derailed trolley resting against the tunnel wall, up against a vertical pipe.

Witness recounts

"The front cart got derailed and crashed into the wall. Luckily almost everyone was seated ..."

Green Line passenger "Vin"

At 1:53 p.m., the MBTA announced that Green Line service on the C and D branches would not be restored for the rest of the day, as the accident happened near an intersection where the two lines cross. Passengers were transported by shuttle buses.

As of press time, crews were working to get the trolley back on the tracks so it could be transported to an MBTA maintenance facility for inspection.

One trolley passenger captured an 11-second video of the aftermath, and posted it on YouTube.

The man, who asked to be identified as "Vin," said in his video description that "the front cart got derailed and crashed into the wall. Luckily almost everyone was seated ... Everyone seems to be fine aside from a few people feeling light headed."

Marathon security will double, spectators asked to be vigilant

Beefed up. Additional "common sense" security guidelines will be in place April 21.

With this year's Boston Marathon expected to draw an additional 9,000 runners and a million spectators, security officials are beefing up security measures and pleading with the public to cooperate.

Last year's deadly bombings at the Boylston Street finish line prompted a slew of new restrictions along the 26.2 mile route, which this year will draw 36,000 runners.

At a press conference Monday, Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency Director Kurt Schwartz said roughly 3,500 security officers will be dispersed along the route. There will also be security

Spectators should not bring:

- Backpacks or over-the-shoulder bags; coolers; costumes or props; containers capable of carrying more than 1 liter of liquid; firearms, knives or Mace; bulky outfits

Runners should not bring:

- Bags on shuttle buses between Boston and Hopkinton; baby strollers; personal hydration system products like CamelBack and Thor checkpoints and an increase in video surveillance, he said.

Security officials want spectators to be especially vigilant and report any suspicious items or activity, and to leave backpacks and other items at home.

Furthermore, spectators are encouraged to carry their items in clear plastic bags.

Kieran Ramsey, an agent in charge of the FBI's Boston office, said there is "no specific intelligence indicating there is a threat to this year's marathon."

"At this point, we don't have one, nor do we anticipate it," Ramsey said.

"In this world, you never eliminate risk. You never bring it down to zero. But we are working very hard at reducing the risk," said State Police Col. Timothy Alben.

Attorneys for accused bomber's friends seeking more records

Attorneys for three college friends of the accused Boston Marathon bomber who are charged with helping cover up evidence of the crime on Monday asked for more records related to their arrests.

Defense attorneys for Robel Phillippos, Dias Kadyrbayev and Azamat Tazhayakov said they needed notes of any statements they made before being advised of their right not to speak to police.

"There were dozens and dozens of officers and after they were ordered out at gunpoint and stripped in public view and handcuffed, they were then left in patrol cars for several hours," and may have made statements overheard by officers, one attorney said. REUTERS

Snowden calls for intelligence oversight

NSA leaker Edward Snowden called for public oversight of U.S. intelligence programs during a Web-streamed speech at SXSW Interactive, one of the most anticipated segments of the technology conference. Snowden, access to naloxone, a blocking agent that can reverse the effects of an overdose and help restore breathing.

The rising level of heroin use in recent years stems from a corresponding epidemic in the abuse of prescription opiate-based painkillers, such as oxycodone, DEA officials say.

Many individuals who start out abusing oxycodone turn eventually to heroin as they build up a tolerance to the pills and find that they can buy heroin far more cheaply than prescription medications on the black market, experts say.

Attorney General Eric Holder said his agency was stepping up efforts to stem sharp increases in deadly heroin overdoses, trafficking in the drug and abuse of prescription narcotics at the root of what he called an "urgent public health crisis."

As part of that campaign, Holder reiterated the Obama administration's call for more law enforcement agencies to train and equip personnel with a medication called naloxone, which reverses the effects of an overdose.

The director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy issued a similar plea to police and fire departments last month.

Holder said 17 states and the District of Columbia have amended their laws to increase

Missing in Malaysia

Jet search continues in 'unprecedented mystery'

The disappearance of a Malaysian airliner about an hour into a flight to Beijing is an "unprecedented mystery," the civil aviation chief said on Monday, as a massive air and sea search now in its third day failed to find any trace of the plane.

Dozens of ships and aircraft from 10 countries scoured the seas around Malaysia and south of Vietnam as questions mounted over possible security lapses and whether a bomb or hijacking attempt could have brought down the plane.

The area of the search would be widened starting today, Azharuddin Abdul Rahman, the head of Malaysia's Civil Aviation Authority, told reporters.

A senior police official told Reuters that people armed with explosives and carrying false identity papers had tried to fly out of Kuala Lumpur in the past, and that current investigations were focused on two passengers who were on the missing plane with stolen passports.

"We have stopped men with false or stolen passports and carrying explosives, who have tried to get past KLIA [airport] security and get on to a plane," he said. "There have been two or three incidents, but I will not divulge the details." REUTERS

Talking points

Mama Mendes?

Eva Mendes is reportedly working hard to convince boyfriend Ryan Gosling that it's time to start a family, according to Radar Online. And part of her campaign apparently involves quality time with friends who already have kids. "Eva is spending a lot of time with January and her 2-year-old son, Xander," a source says of her "Mad Men" friend January Jones. "She's going overboard with her supportive relationship with January, who has her hands full as a young mother at the moment. Eva seems obsessed with proving to Ryan that she's ready to start a family."

Aniston: No #selfies, please

Photos of Jennifer Aniston are pretty common, but one thing is for sure: They'll always be shot by someone else, as the former "Friends" star is definitely not a fan of selfies. "I don't understand them," she tells Self magazine. "I feel like there's enough out there. Why add to it?"

Appearances are deceiving. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

"Mad Men" star Elisabeth Moss, 31, really, really, really (and we mean "really") wasn't a fan of her eight-month marriage to "Portlandia" star Fred Armisen, 47.

"Looking back, I feel like I was really young, and at the time I didn't think that I was that young," Moss said of her relationship with Armisen in her new cover story with New York Magazine. The two divorced each other in 2010. "It was extremely traumatic and awful and horrible," she noted.

Add that to the time she said this about Armisen last year — "One of the greatest things I heard someone say about him is, 'He's so great at doing impersonations. But the greatest impersonation he does is that of a normal person" — and, well, we don't have to ask her what she really thinks about the whole affair. At least we hope the wedding presents were cool?

Don't do it, Selena Gomez!

Selena Gomez is back with her bad-boy boyfriend Justin Bieber, RadarOnline.com reports. And her parents are none too pleased. "It's definitely against her parents' wishes," a source dished to the site. "But they don't have any control over her. She's pulling the, 'Who makes the money around here?' card. It's a s— show behind the scenes."

The Disney star checked in and out of rehab in January of this year. "The partying was, at times, wild. [Her parents] wanted to help her — and they very much encouraged her to go to rehab," says the source. "Others very close to her also urged her to seek professional help."

For now, Mama and Papa Gomez are at a loss — so they have resorted to simply chaperoning the two. "They're doing their best to supervise them. They're tolerating it as long as they know that there is someone who has eyes on them all the time," says the source.

BOOKS 9

Is this the only way to 'Marry Smart'?

Unpopular opinion.

Think "Tiger Mom" is controversial? "Princeton Mom" and "Marry Smart" author Susan Patton has her beat.

Susan Patton, better known as "The Princeton Mom," admits in her new book, "Marry Smart: Advice for Finding The One," that she was "born without a politically correct gene."

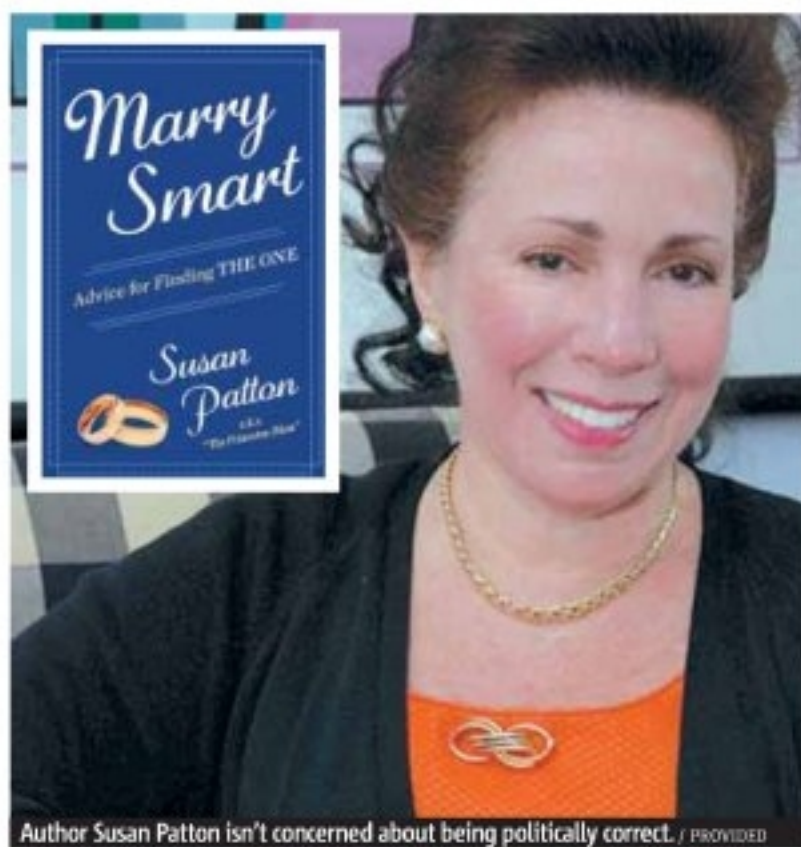

And that's paid off for Patton. After her open letter ("Find a husband before you graduate") — originally sent to her alma mater, Princeton University — went viral, Patton landed herself a book deal.

Most of Patton's beliefs are politically incorrect — some, shockingly so.

"I think date rape is a fallacy," she says. "To refer to sex that a woman really didn't feel like having but wound up having anyway because she didn't know how to leave or regrets it — that's not rape of any sort. That's sex you wish you didn't have. That's mistake sex." This idea is an expansion on a chapter in Patton's book called "Behaving Badly." Here's a hint: She's talking about women, not men.

Given this rhetoric, it's not surprising that Patton rejects feminism. "I certainly am an early beneficiary of the good works of the feminist movement," she allows. "I used to think a feminist was somebody who believed women should be afforded equal opportunities and rights to men. It might have started that way, but it's gone to the dark side. It's an extreme position of demanding independence from men and looking at them as unnecessary. This is terrible for women."

Oddly enough, some of what Patton says is spoken like a true feminist. "A man's not going to make you happy,"

Author Susan Patton isn't concerned about being politically correct. / PROVIDED

"Rules" to follow

Patton's marriage plot

Patton's advice to women who do want children? "Be nice. Learn how to cook. Dress nicely. Learn how to be a good girlfriend. Be sweet. What's wrong with any of that?" she asks. Just don't wait until you're 32: "Then it's absolutely time to settle for Mr. Good Enough."

she says. "You have to make yourself happy." For Patton, finding a husband is largely a means to an end — having a father for your child.

"If you don't want to have children or be married, then this book is probably not for you," she says. Patton even says if having children isn't a top priority, then "take your time. Date however many men you want."

PARENTING 10

Get ahead at work and still be there for your kids

Parenting. Christine Schmidt, founder of Yellow Owl Workshop, gives her tips on balancing a career with being a mom.

Starting your own business can seem overwhelming, especially if you have kids. We talk to one woman who made it happen, Yellow Owl Workshop founder Christine Schmidt. Use her words as inspiration to take the next step in your career, whether it's working toward a promotion or starting a business of your own.

How did you get the idea to start Yellow Owl Workshop? Do you have a business background?

I have the opposite of a business background — I went to art school! Although I studied fine art, it taught me lessons I use every day in business. I learned how to work with tiny budgets and practical timelines, how to value craft and originality, and the importance of asking questions. Most importantly, I had time to build trust in my own creative vision. I began printing stationery by hand in my basement because the only major cost was my time. After I had enough steady customers, I moved into goods like rubber stamps that require more capital to produce.

Were you nervous about having the time to be both a mom and own a business?

I consider myself lucky to be able to afford child care. I am lucky to have a job, especially one that is flexible and fulfilling. For many caretakers, these options are not available. I will say that I am very satisfied with my full life — even if I am tired and wearing old paint-stained maternity leggings. My husband and I have child care three days a week, and I often work on weekends and late at night to make up the time. There are days where I drop the ball at work and days I bawl because I've missed something special with my daughter. She just turned 2 and I'm just now learning to forgive myself and work through those guilts.

What have been some career highlights for you?

Taking the financial risk of my first trade show and having it pay off was a big one. Finishing the final edits on my first book, “Print Workshop,” was another. After pressing “Send,” I laid my head on the keyboard and did that embarrassing laugh/sob only built-up stress and joy can squeeze out of you.

How to stay sane as a working parent

1 Ask for help. You will be most productive doing things that you are passionate about and assigning tasks to others when you can. Half the battle is just preventing burnout. It may mean less money in your pocket, and it may even mean less time with your kids, but consider it an investment in your business, your family and preservation of your own overworked brain.

2 Don't compare yourself to others. This is most important for caregivers who feel inadequate about work or parenting. Nobody else is in your exact same circumstance, so judge yourself kindly and don't look back.

3 Give yourself a damn break! Take some time to be neither a parent nor a business owner, even if it's just taking a bath or watching TV. You will be better at both of these tough jobs if you chill out once in a while.

Spring into break

Take care of the nitty gritty now and this can be you. / COLOURBOX

Info. All you need to know before you head out on spring break.

Spring break season is in full swing, but just because the popular travel window is famous for its throngs of coeds doesn't mean everyone can't benefit from a little R&R this time of year.

To help travelers, we chatted up Mark Murphy, New Jersey-based travel expert and publisher of TravelPulse.com and Vacation Agent magazine.

Paris in the spring

Is late winter/early spring typically a busy travel time? "It depends on the destination. If you're talking about the Caribbean, cruises or Mexico, yes, those areas are booming. But if you're talking about Europe, not really, which means you'll get great discounts," says Murphy.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
@MetroMorgan
morgan.rousseau@metro.us

For fun in the sun

Wait it out

Murphy recommends waiting until the weeks after spring break and Easter to get the better deals in coed-crawling places like the Caribbean. In the U.S., certain places in Florida — like Fort Lauderdale and South Beach — provide good value. Murphy recommends booking the off-peak days of the week to save some cash.

"Come in on a Sunday and leave on a Thursday," he suggests.

The advantage of visiting a tropical destination is that you can stay in an all-inclusive resort. It costs more to get there, but you save money.

Also, look into cruise lines that sail out of Boston and New York, which provide all-inclusive packages.

Book smart

Use your resources

For tech-savvy travelers, Murphy's best advice may come as a shock.

"There are these people called travel agents," he quips. "It's the most obvious secret in travel booking. People feel they can do it themselves, until they screw it up — they overpay and realize they could have gotten a suite for the same price."

The reason: Travel today is specialized, says Murphy. There are agents who specialize in cruises, and others who focus on family-friendly trips. The agents have special relationships with their suppliers, which means opportunities for free upgrades, access to car service and discounts.

But word to the wise: "Not all are good," he says.

Some women aren't too tight with their 'fashionable' clothing

Re: 'Not your mom's jeans' (Metro, March 10) Letter writer Diane E. speaks for herself. I am not familiar with "mom jeans" other than the name. I wondered why they were used as an example of "bad fashion." So they are "too baggy." Probably, it is because they allow leg movement. I have communicated with other women on websites meant for women who love outdoor activities, and love comfortable clothing meant for function, not fashion.

Even so-called active-wear has "low rises" that pinch and are tight, shirts have "princess seams" making it hard to move, etc.

Stop it, clothing manufacturers. We think men have a better deal with plain, simple designs. Women's clothing is a subtle "foot binding" to prevent independence. LUICY MARTINEZ, VIA EMAIL

Get more excited about the Special Olympics

This was my second time being in the United States while the Olympics were on, as I saw London 2012 and Sochi 2014. I was very pleased to see all the media reports about them and how proud the country was with Team USA — and they should be.

Anyway, both times I was equally excited about watching the paralympics or Special Olympics, but the media weren't covering it, and some people here had no idea that those went on at all.

All I'm saying is that it's great how much you care about your athletes, but be proud of the Special Olympics team.

Frenzy begins

AQIB TALIB
GETTY IMAGESNFL free agency
now underway

Free agency officially begins Tuesday in the NFL and it is still unknown as to how big of a player the Patriots will be.

The Pats cut four relative unknowns Monday in receiver T.J. Moe, defensive lineman Cory Grissom, running back Sam McGuffie and linebacker Taylor Reed. It was reported by NFL Network Monday, however, that New England will re-sign tight end Michael Hoomanawanui to a two-year deal.

In moves that could possibly effect the Patriots' plans: the Jets released wide receiver Santonio Holmes, the Steelers are expected to cut linebacker LaMarr Woodley and the 49ers are expected to release cornerback Carlos Rogers.

Decisions by the Patriots will likely be made soon on their own free agents — headlined by cornerback Aqib Talib and slot receiver Julian Edelman. There are also rumblings about restructuring defensive tackle Vince Wilfork's contract or even flat-out releasing the veteran. METRO

pitching rotation

Red Sox manager John Farrell isn't leaving much to the imagination as the start of the 2014 season draws near. Farrell revealed Monday the rotation he is using in spring training will most likely be the same exact starting rotation that begins the regular season on March 31 in Baltimore, according to WEEI.com. The rotation is as follows: 1. Jon Lester; 2. John Lackey; 3. Felix Doubront; 4. Jake Peavy; 5. Clay Buchholz. METRO

The Madness should hit Boston area hard

NCAA. New England schools are expected to be scattered across the brackets when the Big Dance begins.

March is here and the Madness awaits. In just five days we'll know the full field of 68 and it is expected that New England will be well-represented. A look at where your school could be seeded:

Boston University

The Terriers (24-9) won seven of their last eight conference games in the Patriot League and can make their first NCAA tournament appearance since 2011. BU still has some work to do as they will host American (19-12) in the league championship Wednesday (7:30 p.m., CBS). The two teams split their season-series, with American pounding the Terriers in D.C., 86-56, on Jan. 22 and BU edging the Eagles, 71-62, on Feb. 19. Guards D.J. Irving (12.5 ppg) and Maurice Watson Jr. (13.5 ppg) provide head coach Joe Jones with a dynamic backcourt while Dom Morris (11.2 ppg) has been tough up front. Big Dance Ceiling: No. 14 seed. Upset of a big-name program like Syracuse, Michigan, Kansas or Duke in the first weekend.

Harvard

The Crimson (26-4) have established themselves as a dangerous opening weekend opponent for high seeds, climaxing with last year's 68-62 upset of No. 3 New Mexico in Salt Lake City. Harvard is even more talented this season and the Crimson have already punched their ticket to the big dance, courtesy of their 70-58 win at Yale last week. Junior swingman Wesley Saunders

By the numbers

The Harvard men's basketball team has made three consecutive NCAA tournaments. It's no small feat considering prior to 2012, the Crimson hadn't made the tourney since 1946.

Boston University guard D.J. Irving is averaging 12.5 points per game this season as the Terriers seek an NCAA tournament berth. / GETTY IMAGES leads Harvard offensively, popping in 14.0 ppg. This is the third straight year Tommy Amaker's squad has made the NCAAs.

Big Dance Ceiling: No. 11 seed. A run to the Sweet 16 would be difficult but it's never been more doable for Harvard.

UMass-Amherst

The Mullins Center has been rocking this season as UMass (23-7) raced out to a 16-1 record, but the Minutemen have stumbled lately, with losses to Dayton and Saint Louis to open March. That has gotten them a No. 6 seed in the A-10 tourney, which they will begin play in Thursday (9 p.m., NBCSN or CSNNE).

Big Dance Ceiling: No. 4 seed. They'll likely wind up in the six or seven seed range but would rise with a strong A-10 tournament showing this week.

MATT BURKE
@BURKEMETROBOS

March Madness

A look at the state of several other New England schools:

- UConn is the only New England school with annual championship aspirations. The Huskies likely won't win it all this year but head coach Kevin Ollie should be able to get his team a seed in the four-to-seven range. Of local note, UConn is led by senior point guard Shabazz Napier, a Roxbury, Mass., native who is averaging 17.8 ppg.
- The best news for Boston College is they will avoid 25 losses in one season as they are currently 8-23 and can only lose once in this week's ACC tourney.
- Vermont fell in the America East semifinals to Albany on Sunday and are all but assured to miss the tourney.
- Providence is firmly on the bubble at 20-11. The Friars will likely need at least a pair of Big East tourney wins.
